LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

Tuz city marshal at Urbana has occupied that position for eight consecutive years. The Gazette says he is such a familiar figure on the atreets that every town cow in the corporation knows him and keeps out of his way.

THE Pekin correspondent of the Peoris Journal says that some of the Decatur gentlemen who are camping out at the P., D. & E. crossing of the Mackinsw were in Pekin Weknesday, purchasing supplies. Some thought they belonged to the circus which highly amused them.

THE shrewd Jersey man who, when he presented a check for $200 at one of the banks in Newark and received $2000 in return, though to disarm the wrath of the court by stating that he carried off the money merely as a joke on the paying teller, was astonished when the judge replied that the joke was carried too far and furthermore that he would have one year in the penitentiary to reflect on the court's mability to appreciate his humorous instincts.

A NEW process of purifying water has been invented. Roughly stated it conand iron filings, cast iron borings or plate punching. The process has been adopted at Antwerp, and the bad water of that city throughly purified, it is said. The water flows through the hollow truncions of a revolving cylinder, into which a steady stream of the iron is showered. It is claimed that the process is not expensive. Through constant friction upon one another the iron particles remain bright and smooth.

The Club-Room Bible. One of the adornments of nearly every high-toned club-room is a Holy Bible which generally occupies a prominent place in the reception room. This is as it should be. The club man should always have the good book handy when a religious discussion arises, which, it is presumed, is likely to happen any time in every moral community. A very curious tale comes from Buffalo, however, which may have the effect to destroy the impression that the Bible is a useful as well as an ornamental article in the average club-room. It seems that when the City club was organized in Buffalo. Mr. Hayward presented to the club a nice, new Bible. Presumably as an experiment, he slipped a $10 bill between the eaves. One year later Mr. Hayward visted the club and found the money undisturbed in the book. The story would lend one to believe that either the Bible is a usejess adjunct to the club-room. or that club-men are lesss avaricious and more honest than most other mor-

Dangers of Cycling. Dr. Richardson, of London, admits that since he first gave warning of the langers of immoderate cycling, changes have taken place in the construction of th bicycles and tricycles which materially modify the old drawbacks. He is still, however, of the opinion that cycling should never be practiced by boys and girls, since it differs from other exercises in the fact that it molds the bodily framework, as it were, to its own mode of motion; and riders in course of time almost invariably acquire what he calls "the cyclist's figure," which is not graceful, and is not indicative of the possession of perfeetly balanced powers. In brief this eminent sanitary authority is convinced that Mr. Punch's picture of the deformed skeleton of the cyclist of the future, though overdrawn, was not altogether wide of the mark. Of two things, at least, he is satisfied. They are that the temptation of competition is to an earnest and practiced cyclist a "demon of danger," and that the systematic pursuit of cycling should never be fully commenced sefore the age of twenty-one.

Improvement, the Promise of Cure. No array of words can give a dyspeptic one-half the hope that comes from the relief which always follows the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, and the promise of cure is never broken.

"Having suffered from dyspensia for two or three years, I decided to try B. B. B. and after taking one bottle I found myself so much better I got another bottle, and after taking that I had no more need of medione. "MRS. G. C, WHITE, Taberg, N. Y."

Don't pay for daily bread and then groan with dyspepsia, when a bottle of B, B, B, will give you relief. Repeated tests with uniform success prove that dyspepsia cannot withstand B, B, B. "I have taken the second bottle of Burdock's Blood Bitters, and it has cured me of dyspepsia, with which I suffered for six years. "W. W. HAMILTON, Lock Haven, Pa."

St. Cuthbert would have no female creature about his place at Landisfarne, not suffering even a cow, saying:

"Where there is a cow there must be a woman, and where there is a woman there must be mischief." In the cathedral at Durham, dedicated to him, a black cross in the pavement marked the spot beyond which no woman was allowed to pass. In 1338 Edward III and his queen went to the priory at Durham and lodged togother.

In the middle of the night a monk broke into their room and rudely awakened the royal pair, saying to the queen that St. Cuthbert loved not the sex and that she must up and go. The queen tumbled out of hed and spent the rest of the night in the church, praying for pardon to the patron saint, whom she had offended. In 1417 two servant girls dressed themselves as men and "impiously approached the saint's shrine," only to be severely handled by the authorities.—St. Louis Republic.

Dr. Rudolf Virchow examined all the the royal mummies to which he had ac-

From his re searches, he reached the opinion that there was no negro blood in their veins, and that they were distinguishable from Europeans only with difficulty. Ideas in regard to Cleopatra's looks should there fore be revised.—Exchange.

Round and Round.

Dr. Garretson is accustomed to illustrate the materialistic tendencies of the age by an imaginary conversation with a western farmer; "Why do you raise corn" "To feed hogs." "What for?" "To sell them and buy more land."
"What for?" "To feed more corn."
"What for?" "To feed more hogs."
"What for?" "To sell and buy more land," and so on,

Mr. J. F. Masters, cashier of Emmitt & Co.'s bank at Waverly, Ohio, says: "I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best I have ever used. After using several other kinds, without benefit, I tried it and it quickly cured me, after years of suffering with an obstinate cough and throat trouble." 60 cent bottles for sale by John A. Long Lived Family. Our item last week regarding Mrs

Nancy Hays, Wash Hull, and others, and their combined ages, has caused some of our older readers to do some figuring. Washington Gregory, of this city, informs us that his father's family there are six children hving, of which he is the young est. Their names and ages are: John Gregory, 81 years; Mary Roff, 75 years Edward Gregory, 33 years; George Gre-gory, 70 years; Ellen Carwile, 65 years, and Washington Gregory, 63 years, mak-ing the total number for the four brothers and two sisters 427 years, or an average age for six persons of 71 years and 2 months. He was in favor of calling an International Congress of Charities and Correction, and he moved that a com mittee be appointed to consider the feasibility of the project. The motion was adopted.

Mrs. Spencer, of Washington, ex-tended an invitation to visit Washington next Thursday. The delegates could be assured of a hearty welcome from President Harrison, Congress and the whole people of the city. The invitation was accepted.
"The "Prisoners' Sunday" was made the subject of a special report by General R. Brinkerhoff, of Ohio, in which he said crime is frightfully on the in crease, and for the last fifty years had risen like a tide to which there is no ebb. In 1850 the criminals were one in every 3,442 of the population; in 1880 one in 1.839, and from present appearance the census of 1890 will show one in every 500. This condition must be checked or civilized society must cease to exist. In accordance with the sentiments expressed in this paper a resolution was passed calling upon all the churches to Beckett, who byes near Blue Mound, had two valuable cows killed by lightning. They were found in the lot near the windmill, where a fine buil was killed two years ago. Last year he had two mares and a colt kided by lightning, but on none of the stock was the owner able to find a mark to indicate manner of death. There is a barbed wire fence close to the spot where the stock was killed. Mr. Beckett has carried stock insurance since the bull was killed. He does not blame the wire fence. He believes the windmill, which is forty feet high, is the "Jonah," it has never been struck. He has wire fencing all over his farm, and stock running everywhere, but so far none have met death except close to that windmill.

ARTIFICIAL MERMAIDS. THE "GIRLS OF THE SEA" MANU-FACTURED BY SKILLED HANDS.

Monkeys' Bodies Joined to Fishes' Tails with Cunning and Desterity-How the People Are Deceived by Showmen and Their Alds-The Mermald Maker Talks

"Mermaids made and repaired." Such an advertisement was well calculated to attract attention, and, as it confronted me one day in a little frequented street in a large eastern city, I determined to make the acquaintance of the maker of these incongruities. Pulling an old fash-ioned brass bell handle, a little old man, crowned with a square paper cap, came There was the "beggarly array of empty boxes," vials containing strange animals, curious stuffed birds which peered from high shelves and were laced together by cobwebs laden with dust, while many other objects strewn about told of the rade of the taxidermist. THE MERNAID MAKER. "Yes," said the old man, in reply to my questions, "I am a mermaid maker, and I flatter myself that I have produced some of the most artistic mermaids ever placed upon the market. Why, sir," continued the speaker, warming up under the recollection of his triumphs, "I produced one that fooled even the doctors. You see, mermaids have been made as long as anything. The Chinese manufactured them centuries ago, and so well that a large number of people believed

"One day a man came to me and I knew the moment I saw him that he was showman. He said he had mermaids, but that on the last trip a man had offered to wager him $500 that he would not dare to allow the mermaid to be cut open; so he wanted something that would bear inspection and be ready for such a contingency. I told him I could do it, and received the order to go ahead.

"Generally in cheap work I stuffed the skins with cotton or something of the kind and let them go, but in this case I went to work on scientific principles. I took the skin of a monkey and separated it at the waist; then allowed it to dry as a mummy would, all of which I helped along by the application of heat. I now took a fish common in the China ea, one that would not be familiar, and treated it in a similar way, and finally I youned them both. I fastened scales upon the monkey portion and carefully graded them up among the hairs; then intro-duced some hairs down upon the fish portion; barnacles were fastened here and there, and a great cut was left open up and down the abdomen, through which any one could readily see the ribs and the joining of the vertebræ.

"The face had been given an agonized ook, the hands were clinched, and, all in all, it was one of the most disagreea-ble sights I ever saw, even though I did

"Yes, it gave complete satisfaction. When they exhibited it a cloth was thrown over the body, and when any question was raised the proprietor would say that he would leave it to a committee of medical men, thus being confident of obtaining some notoriety. In one case a number of provincial doctors were completely deceived, and signed a paper re-tracting certain statements which they had made to the effect that the mermaid

EXHIBITING THE FREAKS. The old mermaid maker has passed away, but examples of his work are often seen either in grog shops along the har bor streets in sldpping towns, in old taverns and occasionally in a museum. The mermaid is generally an adjunct of the sule show, or second rate circus. Such a one I recently saw. It was of large size and kept in a tank of water. A spirited painting on canvas depicted a beautiful naiden, half fish, floating upon the waves, while the young man who stood by shouted his story of the "Lady of the Seas," unconsciously, we will assume, giving the impression that the mermaid was alive and frisking about the tank. The little inclosure was well patronted, and it was curious to listen to the comments of those who paid the required dime It was a holiday, and young men and women were searching for some excuse to spend their earnings. When ten or twelve victims had gathered the proprietor would wink at a friend, borrow ns cane and begin a lecture remarkable for the exact repetition of its points, in which he explained that the mericald was half fish and half human, and had been captured in some foreign sea and brought to America at enormous expense. At least one-half the people who gazed at the mermaid evidently had a suspicion that it was a fraud, while a third accepted it as a fact and expressed their amazement and wonder at it, all of which shows that with all our educational advantages we are still credulous

One of the most skillful workers in this incanny art was well known to us, and from whom many hints as to the ways thich are dark were obtained. In several large popular unscientific museums of the country remarkably hideous mermaids are exhibited, generally under glass cases, while with them is offered a paper purporting to be the testimony of the captors. It is remarked that in many cases the names signed to these papers are not the titious but evidently given in good faith. There is but one assumption, that either the men were bribed or decoived, -Cor. Philadelphia Times,

Among the various remedies for sleepessness lately advised is that in which the subject, after taking a deep inspiration, holds his breath until discomfort is felt, then repeats the process a second and a third time, this being, as a rule, enough to procure sleep. A slight de-gree of asphyxia is thus relied on as a oporific agent, but the theoretical correctness of this method is somewhat open to question.—London Lancet.

In the greater stands the butcher, with a high chopping blook, resting on three substantial legs, before him, while behind him hangs the steelyard and a cleaver, he himself being occupied in dividing a rib of meat with another

On the wall above him, just as with us, is a row of hooks near to each other, on which hang pieces of meat already dressed; a rib and a leg of meat, a pork ioint and udders—a tidbit of the Remans also lungs and liver, and, last of all, the favorite boar's bead,

On the left, in the smaller division of the shop, the wife of the butcher sits in an easy chair, with an account book on her knees, engaged in assisting the business of her husband by acting as bookkeeper. Her headdress points to the time of the Antonines.-Youth's Com

The First Clock Turned Back. Standard time, it seems, is not a new thing. In the twentieth chapter of II Kings it was applied with far more than modern facility and variety. Hezekiali, who was a contemporary of Homer, was sick unto death, and was advised by the Prophet Isaiah to put his house in order. On being thus admonished Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and wept, then prayed for recovery.

Soon afterward he was assured by the prophet that the prayer had been heard, and that fifteen years would be added to his life. Hezekiah asked for a sign that he would thus happily be healed. Isaiah answered that the shadow on the sun dial should be moved forward or backward ten degrees as the desired sign, And the sacred history continues thus: "10. And Hezekiah answered: 'It is:

light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees; nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.' "11. And Isaiah the prophet cried into the Lord; and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz."-Jeweler's Weekly. A Wax Figure of an Emperor Beheaded. There are men employed at the Eden Musee whose business it is to comb the hair of the wax figures, keep their faces and necks clean, and brush their clothes This is supposed to be done out of busi ness hours, but occasionally some of the helpers get caught. One of these things which some people call a funny coin-cident happened the very day that Bismarck resigned. The young man who had charge of the crowned head wax department, without any knowledge of what was going on in Germany, went among the crowned wax heads with orush and comb.

The heads of these figures are fastened on in such a way that they can be easily removed. It was therefore a funny coincident that on the day the young German emperor accepted the resignation of the old Iron Chancellor the young hair brusher of the Musee took off the head of the young emperor to comb and brush the hair. It was still funnier when he forgot to put it back and several visitors saw the figure standing before them beheaded.—Chicago Tribune
